Good point and Bad point

Good

The total amount of tuition to be paid for the approved extended period is the same as the standard period of study!

Tuition for the standard will be paid in installments during the approved extended period.

Ex: permitted to extend the period from 3 to 5 years (Doctoral program)

Tuition(1 year) : ¥ 535,800

Total tuition for standard period(3 year) : ¥1,607,400

→ Tuition for the approved extended period

Total = ¥1,607,400

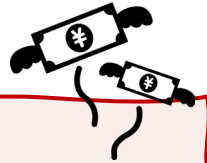

1 year = $\frac{¥1,607,400}{5 \text{ years}}$ = ¥321,480

Good point and Bad point

Bad

If you fail to complete your study as planned, you may incur more tuition than planned...

The system is based on planned study.

Therefore, if your plans change due to a leave of absence or withdrawal, and your permit is cancelled, you may be responsible for a larger tuition payment than you had planned.

I was in the system but had to withdrawal ...

Withdrawal after 5 years of extending the period(Doctoral program)

➡ Extending the period is cancelled and additional payment will be made the difference between the tuition.

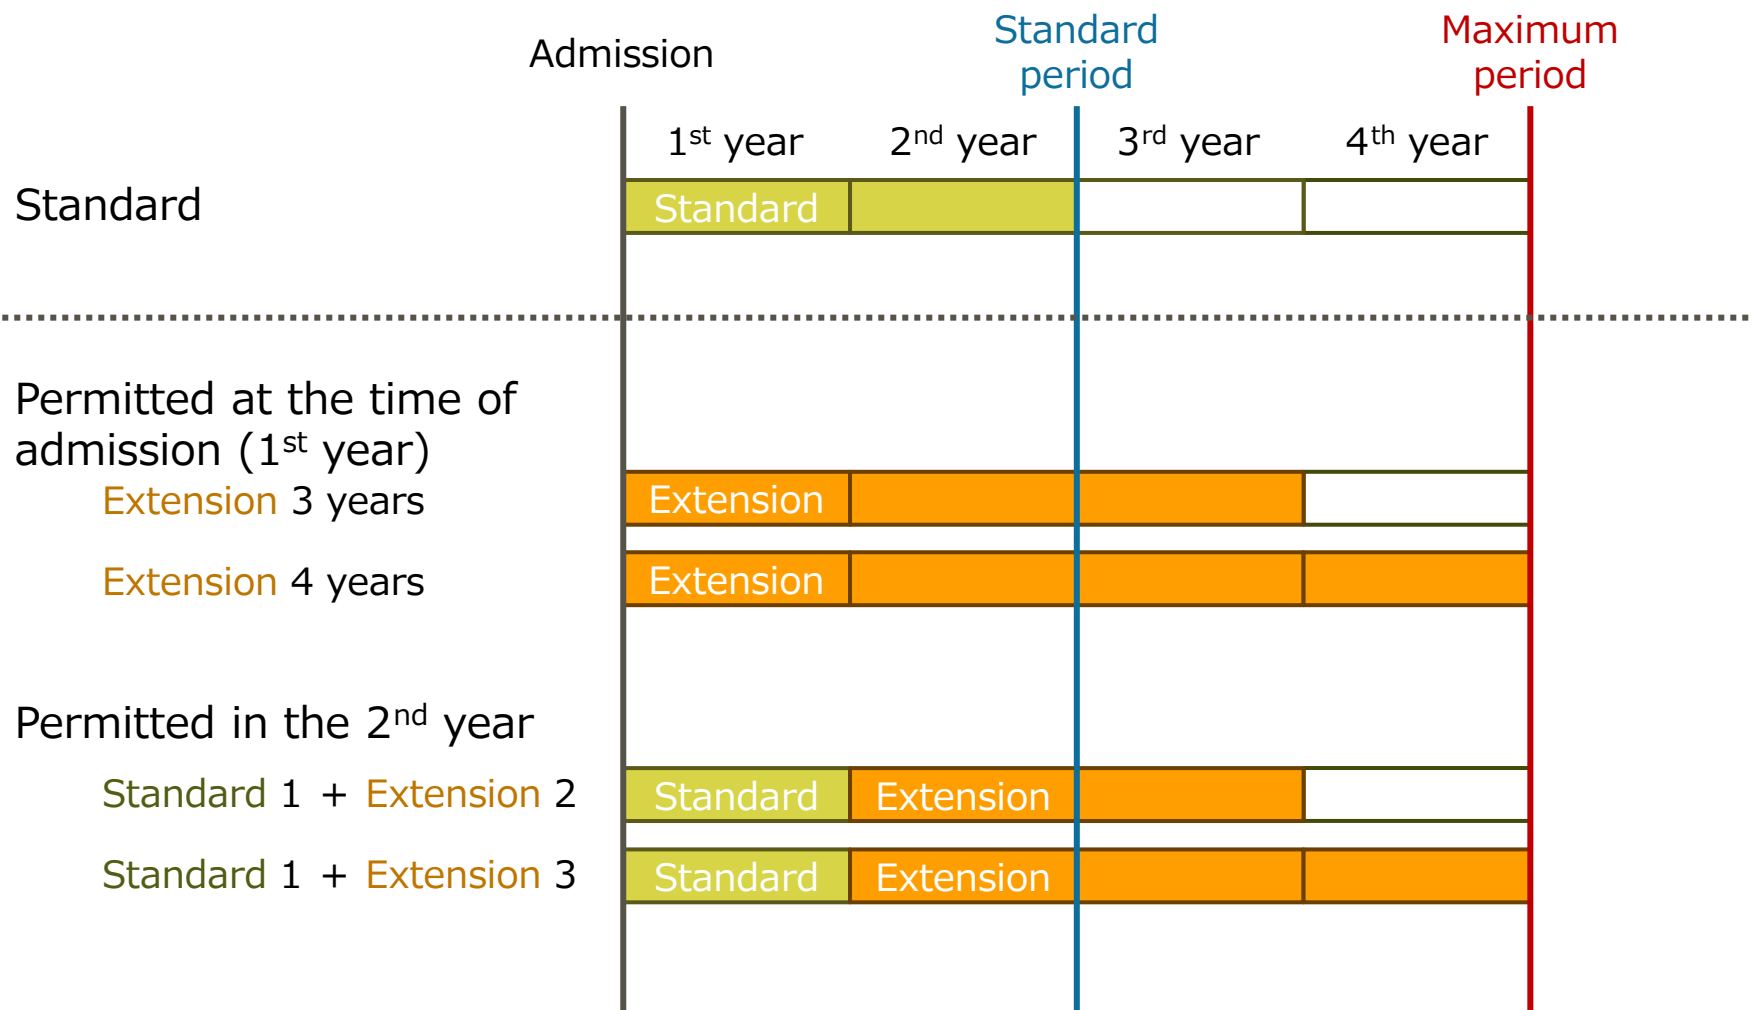

Regular tuition(5 years)	—	Tuition paid	=	additional payment
¥2,679,000		¥1,607,400		¥1,071,600

Please consider carefully whether you can plan your study before applying.

Change of the Extended Period of Registration

Submission Deadline

For admission in April:

By January of the academic year preceding the final academic year of the approved extended period of registration

For admission in October:

By July of the academic year preceding the final academic year of the approved extended period of registration

ex) Approved to complete the program in five years

When considering a leave of absence, be aware of the submission deadline!

There have been a number of situations where students who have decided to take a leave of absence in their final year of study have missed the deadline to apply for a change of the extended period, resulting in the cancellation of their extending the period. Please note that if you cancel your extending the period, you will be charged for additional tuition.

Case study example

Taking a leave of absence during the final academic year

I'm in my final year, but work is too busy. Maybe I should take a leave of absence.

◀ Student

- Enrolled in a doctoral program (admission in April)
- Approved extended period: 5 years

I was supposed to graduate this year, can I still take a leave starting in May?

Student

You can take a leave of absence, but the deadline for applying to change of the extended period of registration has already passed.

So, extending the period will be canceled, and additional tuition fees will apply.

Staff

Since there will be a difference in tuition compared to a regular 5-year enrollment ...

The additional tuition fee will be ¥857,280.

¥857,280 ?!

I have no choice. I'll pay the ¥857,280 and take the leave of absence. If only the period had been submitted in time ...

Student

Extending the Period of Registration require careful planning !
If your plan fails, it might not be cost-effective after all.
